- Compliance with Laws and Regulations

We adhere to all applicable local, national, and international laws and regulations in all business practices.

Compliance is a fundamental aspect of our operations that safeguards our integrity, reputation, and long-term success. It is essential for every employee to familiarize themselves with the laws relevant to their roles and to remain updated on any changes that may affect our business. Understanding these regulations not only protects the company but also promotes ethical behaviour across all levels of the organization.

If you are unsure which laws apply, please contact Legal or Compliance.

Prohibition against forced labour

Not with us!

Money laundering and funding of terrorism

Our organization is firmly committed to preventing money laundering and the funding of terrorism in all its operations. We strictly prohibit any involvement in activities that facilitate these crimes and require all employees and partners to adhere to relevant laws and regulations. To support this commitment, we will implement robust monitoring systems, conduct regular training, and ensure thorough due diligence in all transactions, fostering a culture of transparency and accountability throughout our organization.

Corruption, bribery and unfair business practices

What is corruption?

Corruption refers to the abuse of power for personal gain, typically involving unethical or illegal actions by individuals in positions of authority. It undermines trust, distorts markets, and can have severe social and economic consequences.

Example:

Vendors invite key employees to events to promote their services and attract more clients.

What is bribery?

Bribery is a specific form of corruption where someone offers, gives, receives, or solicits something of value to influence the actions of an official or other person in authority. It is often used to gain unfair advantages in business or politics.

Example:

An employee accepts a bribe to offer a reduced fee.

What are unfair business practices?

Unfair business practices refer to business practices that restrict competition, such as price fixing, collusion, and the establishment of monopolies. Antitrust law refers to legislation aimed at promoting fair competition and preventing monopolistic practices in the marketplace.

Example:

An employee visits the potential client to gather information about other bidders and competitors, specifically regarding their pricing.

Why It Is Not Accepted

Corruption, bribery and unfair business practices are not accepted because they undermine fairness, integrity, and trust in both public and private sectors. They create unequal playing fields, harm competition, and can lead to significant economic and social instability. Moreover, such practices violate ethical standards and legal regulations, damaging an organization's reputation and leading to severe penalties. Maintaining a culture of integrity is essential for fostering sustainable relationships and ensuring long-term success.

Consequences:

Disciplinary action / Fines and damages / Imprisonment

- Health and Safety

Our employees are our most valuable asset. Your health and safety are our top priority

Follow all health and safety guidelines to ensure a safe working environment for yourself and your colleagues. Adhering to these protocols is not only a legal obligation but also a shared responsibility that promotes the well-being of everyone in the workplace. Familiarize yourself with the safety procedures specific to your role and actively participate in training sessions, drills, and any updates to safety policies.

If you identify potential hazards or unsafe conditions, report them immediately to your supervisor or the designated safety officer. Your proactive approach can prevent accidents and contribute to a culture of safety. Additionally, feel encouraged to suggest improvements to existing safety practices, as your insights are valuable in enhancing our collective safety standards.

Remember that personal accountability plays a crucial role in maintaining a safe workplace. Use protective equipment as required, follow safe operating procedures, and be mindful of your surroundings. By prioritizing safety and looking out for one another, we can foster a work environment that is not only productive but also secure for all employees. Your commitment to these principles is essential in cultivating a culture of care and respect.

○ Social Responsibility

Each employee has a role to play in promoting ethical behaviour and community engagement.

Engage in practices that contribute positively to the community and environment, reflecting the company's commitment to sustainability. This includes participating in supporting local organizations, and being mindful of our ecological footprint. By taking part in these activities, we not only strengthen our bonds with the community but also reinforce our values of compassion and integrity.

We encourage all employees to seek out opportunities for sustainable practices in their daily work. This may involve minimizing waste, conserving energy, and using resources efficiently. Small changes, such as recycling, reducing paper usage, and considering the environmental impact of our decisions, can collectively make a significant difference. Sharing your ideas for sustainability initiatives with your team can foster a culture of innovation and responsibility, allowing us to grow as a company and as responsible citizens.

Additionally, we recognize the importance of ethical sourcing and responsible business practices in our operations. Engage with vendors and partners who align with our values, and advocate for practices that support fair labour and environmental stewardship. By promoting social responsibility within our business relationships, we enhance our reputation and ensure that our impact on society and the planet is a positive one. Together, we can make a lasting difference that extends beyond our workplace.

○ Conflict of Interest Management

Avoid situations where personal interests may conflict with the interests of the company, and disclose any potential conflicts. It is vital to recognize that even the appearance of a conflict can undermine trust and integrity within the organization. Employees should be vigilant in assessing their personal relationships, financial interests, and outside activities to ensure they do not interfere with their professional responsibilities. When in doubt, seek guidance from your supervisor or the appropriate compliance officer.

In cases where a potential conflict of interest arises, prompt disclosure is essential. This transparency allows for appropriate measures to be taken, ensuring that decisions are made in the best interest of the company and its stakeholders. Employees are encouraged to document any relevant relationships or transactions that could be perceived as conflicts and report them according to established protocols. By addressing potential conflicts proactively, we maintain a culture of accountability and trust.

Additionally, employees should refrain from engaging in any outside business activities that could detract from their commitment to the company or compete with its interests. This includes accepting gifts or favours from vendors or customers that could influence professional judgment. Upholding these standards not only protects the integrity of our operations but also fosters an environment where ethical decision-making is prioritized.

Together, we can uphold the values of our organization and ensure that personal interests do not compromise our collective goals.

- Confidentiality and Data Protection

We treat company information with due care

Protect sensitive company information and respect the privacy of colleagues and customers, ensuring data is handled responsibly. Maintaining confidentiality is essential for building trust within the organization and with our customers. Employees must be aware of the types of information that are considered confidential, including financial data, proprietary business strategies, and personal information of both co-workers and customers. Safeguarding this information is not only a legal obligation but also a fundamental aspect of our ethical responsibility.

When handling sensitive data, always follow established protocols for storage, transmission, and disposal. Use secure channels for sharing information, and ensure that access to confidential data is restricted to those who require it for their roles. Employees should refrain from discussing sensitive information in public spaces or using unsecured devices. By adopting these practices, we minimize the risk of data breaches and uphold our commitment to protecting the integrity of our operations.

In the event of a suspected data breach or accidental disclosure of confidential information, report the incident immediately to the designated GDPR team. Prompt reporting is crucial in mitigating potential harm and ensuring that appropriate corrective measures are taken. Additionally, employees are obliged to participate in annual training sessions on data protection to stay informed about best practices and legal requirements. By prioritizing confidentiality, we can cultivate a safe and trustworthy environment for everyone involved.

- Fair treatment

We respect each other

Treat all individuals fairly and without discrimination, fostering an inclusive workplace that respects diversity. Our commitment to fairness means recognizing and valuing the unique contributions of every employee, regardless of their background, identity, or personal characteristics. It is essential to create an environment where everyone feels welcome, respected, and empowered to express their ideas and perspectives. Embracing diversity not only enhances our workplace culture but also drives innovation and success.

All employees are expected to actively promote inclusivity by challenging biases and stereotypes, both in themselves and in others. This includes being open to different viewpoints and experiences, and seeking to understand and learn from one another. Discrimination, harassment, or any form of bias based on race, gender, age, religion, sexual orientation, disability, or any other characteristic will not be tolerated. We all share the responsibility to hold ourselves and our colleagues accountable, ensuring that our workplace is free from hostility and prejudice.

Employees are invited to voice their concerns or suggest improvements to our practices related to fairness and inclusivity. By working together, we can create a supportive atmosphere that not only respects individual differences but also leverages them to achieve our shared goals. In doing so, we ensure that everyone has the opportunity to thrive and contribute to our collective success.

- Commitment to Quality

We strive for excellency

Strive for excellence in all tasks, ensuring that work meets or exceeds the company's quality standards. A commitment to quality is not merely an expectation but a core value that drives our success and reputation in the industry. Each employee plays a crucial role in maintaining these standards by taking personal responsibility for the quality of their work. This involves being attentive to detail, continuously seeking improvement, and being open to constructive feedback.

To achieve and uphold high-quality standards, employees should engage in ongoing professional development and training opportunities. Staying informed about best practices, industry trends, and innovative techniques allows us to enhance our skills and deliver exceptional results. Collaboration with colleagues also fosters an environment where knowledge is shared, enabling teams to leverage each other's strengths and collectively elevate the quality of our outputs.

In instances where quality may be compromised, it is important to communicate openly and promptly with supervisors or team members. Addressing potential issues early can prevent larger problems down the line and demonstrate a proactive approach to maintaining excellence. By cultivating a culture of accountability, support, and continuous improvement, we reinforce our commitment to quality and ensure that our work consistently reflects the high standards our customers and stakeholders expect. Together, we can build a legacy of excellence that benefits both our organization and the communities we serve.
